Okapis, just like giraffes, have long tongues that can be up to 18 inches long. They stick out their tongues to reach and grasp leaves for their meals.

Just like giraffes, okapis have long tongues that can be up to 18 inches long. They stick out their tongues to reach and grasp leaves for their meals.

Only male okapis have short horns covered with skin and fur called ossicones. Both male and female giraffes have them. Only male okapis have short horns covered with skin and fur called ossicones. Both male and female giraffes have them.

The okapi’s closest relative to the okapi is not a zebra even though they both have stripes on their bodies. Actually, the giraffe is the closest living relative to the okapi!

Fast Facts About Okapis

- Okapis practice social distancing as solitary animals for most of their lives. They come together only for breeding and raising their babies.
- The okapi’s closest relative to the okapi is not a zebra even though they both have stripes on their bodies. Actually, the giraffe is the closest living relative to the okapi!

Social Distancing Champ!

- Okapi